Course description:

This course provides a rough survey of Canadian literature from the 19th century to the present, with an emphasis on writing of the past 50 years. The course attempts to provide representation of Canadian writing from various time periods, genres (novel, short story, poetry, drama, memoir, essay), and region (including a franco-Québécois text in translation). The course includes instruction in the writing of critical essays and research papers.

Texts and readings:

Robert Lecker, ed. Open Country: Canadian Literature in English

Martha Ostenso, Wild Geese

Sheila Watson, The Double Hook

Michael Ondaatje, Running in the Family

Dany Laferrière, How to Make Love to a Negro Without Getting Tired (Comment faire l'amour avec un Nègre sans se fatiguer)

Brad Fraser, Poor Superman

Assignments and Evaluation:

Participation (measured by quizzes)	10%
Group project	10%
Midterm tests	2x10=20%
Shorter paper	15%
Research Paper	25%
Registrar-scheduled Final Exam	20%
	100%

Participation will be a measure of your attendance at and preparation for each class. Due to the size of the class, this will be measured quantitatively, with periodic, elementary, unannounced quizzes in class on the day's assigned reading. There will be five such quizzes; the lowest grade of these will be dropped and the remaining grades averaged to determine your mark for this component. This is to account for unfortunate occurrences, such as your illness or the death of a close relative. Consequently, there will be no rewrites for these quizzes.

Group projects will be undertaken by groups of from 3-4 students; each project will involve some oral presentation component of no more than 20 minutes (with 10 minutes for questions) in which each group member will be required to speak for about 5 minutes. These group projects will range from straightforward summaries of theoretical or critical essays relating to our primary texts; presentations on visual arts that relate to our literary texts; presentations on literary institutions such as little magazines or small presses; the composition of maps illustrating the geographic communities of some of our texts; a composition of a detailed family tree to accompany one of our texts; a comparison of the film adaptation of one of our novels with the original novel; performances of scenes from the play we are studying; and other topics or creative projects. A list of projects will be provided on the first day, and students should sign up as soon as possible (the 'musical chairs' principle will apply to these projects).

You will each write one shorter paper (1000 words) on one of the shorter works (short story or poem(s)) and one research paper (2000 words) on one of the longer works. The term will be divided into halves (see the course schedule). You will have a choice as to whether you want to write your shorter paper in the first half of the course and your research paper in the second half, or vice versa. Further details on these papers will be given in class, early in term, as will various deadlines.

Given the relative brevity of class time (50 minutes), in lieu of a single midterm there will be two midterm tests, one in February and the other in March. The final exam will be cumulative and scheduled by the Registrar. Students must be available for examinations up to the last day of the examination period (April 17, 19-29).

You do not have to complete all assignments to receive a passing grade in this course. Assignments submitted after the deadline will be penalized (e.g. with the loss of a third of a grade for each day [not class] that the assignment is overdue). Extra-credit assignments will not be offered.

Note: Please make all efforts to take assignments directly to the instructor. If it is not possible to do so, take your assignment to SS1152 and place it in the drop-box. Your assignment will then be date-stamped and placed in your instructor's mailbox. Please keep a copy of your assignment in case of loss by any cause. Assignments cannot be returned by staff in the Department office. E-mailed submissions will not be accepted and will be deleted.

Note regarding technologies:

Please turn off all communication devices during class. Laptop computers are acceptable in class as long as they do not present a distraction to others. I reserve the right to ban computers from the class if anyone's computer presents a distraction. I am happy to answer inquiries via e-mail but please note that proper e-mail etiquette should be followed, and that what you consider 'urgent' may not be considered urgent by others. I will not respond to inquiries over e-mail regarding matters I have addressed in class. You are encouraged to meet someone in the class early in term and exchange e-mails so you can help one another if one person misses a class.

Note regarding textbooks:

Much of this class will involve close readings from literary texts. As such, students are required to have the texts to be discussed with them in class. Students who consistently do not have the texts with them in class will receive a grade of '0' for participation, after a written warning from the instructor.

PLAGIARISM

Plagiarism is an extremely serious offence. Please read the following information carefully. The penalty routinely recommended by the English Department for documented plagiarism is failure of the course in which the offence occurred; academic probation is also routinely applied at the Faculty level. Suspension or expulsion can result from severe or repeated plagiarism.

The University Calendar states:

1. Plagiarism - Essentially plagiarism involves submitting or presenting work in a course as if it were the student's own work done expressly for that particular course when, in fact, it is not. Most commonly plagiarism exists when:

- (a) the work submitted or presented was done, in whole or in part, by an individual other than the one submitting or presenting the work (this includes having another impersonate the student or otherwise substituting the work of another for one's own in an examination or test),
- (b) parts of the work are taken from another source without reference to the original author,
- (c) the whole work (e.g., an essay) is copied from another source, and/or,
- (d) a student submits or presents work in one course which has also been submitted in another course (although it may be completely original with that student) without the knowledge of or prior agreement of the instructor involved.

While it is recognized that scholarly work often involves reference to the ideas, data and conclusions of other scholars, intellectual honesty requires that such references be explicitly and clearly noted.

Plagiarism occurs when direct quotations are taken from a source without specific acknowledgement, or when original ideas or data from the source are not acknowledged. Citing your sources in a bibliography is not enough, because a bibliography does not establish which parts of a student's work are taken from other sources. MLA (Modern Language Association) documentation or other recognized forms of citation must be used for this purpose. Advice on adequate documentation can be found at the following web sites:

DEPARTMENT OF ENGLISH STATEMENT ON PRINCIPLES OF CONDUCT

According to the University Calendar, (<http://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/j.html>) "The University of Calgary community has undertaken to be guided by the following statements of purpose and values: to promote free inquiry and debate, to act as a community of scholars, ..., to respect, appreciate, and encourage diversity, [and] to display care and concern for community". The Department of English, like the university as a whole, is committed to a "positive and productive learning and working environment." This environment is characterized by appreciation and encouragement of diversity and respect for the dignity of all persons: students, support staff, and faculty. The department will not tolerate unacceptable behaviour, such as threatening gestures, threatening or abusive verbal or written communication (including e-mails), or any conduct that "seriously disrupts the lawful education and related activities of students and/or university staff". Any cases of such misconduct should be reported immediately to the department Head, who, depending on the nature and severity of the incident, may then take further appropriate action.
