Office hours: T/R 3:30-4:30
Office: SS1106

Course description

This is course about how to read eighteenth-century poetry, and an opportunity to discuss why we should read eighteenth-century poetry now.

Thematically, the texts this course will consider range widely, but most share a preoccupation with the relationship between exteriors and interiors: with the parallel between the violence of a winter storm and a change in the political climate, for instance, or with the relationship between the social dynamics produced by emerging capitalism and new theories of mind (and madness). Early in the term, our class discussion will be focused on the formal innovations that eighteenth-century poets develop to explore these relationships: we'll consider, for instance, the heroic couplet and satire as forms well-suited to an age of public debate, and we'll trace the rise and implications of the eighteenth-century vogue for forms that seem to confuse the boundaries between animate and inanimate life, like personification. Along the way, we'll experiment with the difference between listening to poetry and reading it, and we'll join the authors we read in debate about the public role of poetry, with special attention to genres – like the georgic and the pastoral, along with mock forms of each – that treat the new economic order of the eighteenth century as a form of environmental change. By the end of this term, you will have developed the critical skills and vocabulary you need to explain how these Enlightenment forms and terms of inquiry continue to structure our world today, and you will be familiar enough with the goals, techniques, and limitations of the forms we have inherited to create your own imitation of an eighteenth-century poem about twenty-first-century life.

Required readings

Readings will include selections from Anne Finch, John Gay, Jonathan Swift, Alexander Pope, Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, James Thomson, John Dyer, Stephen Duck, Mary Collier, Mary Leapor, Samuel Johnson, Thomas Gray, Oliver Goldsmith, Anna Laetitia Barbauld, Ann Yearsley, and William Cowper, among others. All of these readings will be drawn from the following anthology, which is available at the University of Calgary Bookstore:

- Eighteenth-Century Poetry: An Annotated Anthology, 3rd edition, ed. David Fairer and Christine Gerrard (Wiley Blackwell, 2015)

Additional readings by Elizabeth Hands and Phillis Wheatley will be posted on D2L. A number of helpful reference texts – including Adams's Poetic Designs: An Introduction to Meters, Verse Forms, and Figures of Speech, Abrams's A Glossary of Literary Terms, and the MLA Handbook for Writers of Research Papers (8th edition) – are also available and on reserve at the Taylor Family Digital Library.

Assignment details

Please note: Additional instructions and assessment details (rubrics) for each of the following assignments will be provided in class.

Assignment #1: One Poem, Three Ways (15%)

At the end of a four-week module on reading poetry, you will be asked to choose one of the poems assigned for this course and interpret it three ways: once with an emphasis on the text's form or structure (i.e. rhythm and meter), once with an emphasis on its use of figurative language, and once with an emphasis on either its layout or its genre. Each of these interpretations should be 350-500 words long, and each should include detailed explication in support of a clear argumentative claim. Bonus marks will be available for selecting a text that we have not discussed in class before this assignment is due. Individually, each interpretation is worth 5% of your final grade; overall, this assignment is worth 15% of your final grade.

Assignment #2: Critical Edition

You will complete your major research project for this course in four stages. Please note: You are welcome to select a new primary text at any point during this process. If you do, however, please note that you must submit, along with your Critical Edition, drafts of Worksheets #1 and #2 related to the primary text you have ultimately decided to use.

Worksheet #1: Preliminary Research Questions (5%)

First, you will use Eighteenth-Century Collections Online (or a similar database) to find an eighteenth-century poem that you would like to prepare for wider scholarly use. Once you've chosen your text, you will complete a worksheet that will prompt you to take notes on any key terms, historical details, or other allusions that you'd like to investigate, along with general notes on the text's form, genre, and publication history. At the end of this worksheet, you will be invited to draft 2-3 questions for further research towards your critical edition. Worksheet #1 is worth 5% of your overall grade for this course.

Worksheet #2: Research Summary (15%)

Next, drawing on both reference texts and secondary sources, you will summarize the results of the research you've completed to answer your preliminary questions. Looking outwards to other recent scholarship on the text, author, or genre or poem you've selected, you'll also summarize and describe the stakes of any significant scholarly debate on your research subject, and identify 2-3 potential points of intervention you might consider for the essay you'll write to introduce your critical edition. Worksheet #2 is worth 15% of your final grade for this course.

Critical Edition & Introductory Essay (30%)

Finally, you'll prepare a critical edition of your poem. Your edition should be annotated, which means that it should include contextual footnotes to explain significant allusions, any terms that might be unfamiliar to a new reader, and any changes you've made to your copytext. Your edition should also include an introductory essay of 1250-1500 words. This essay should present a close reading to illustrate what is unconventional or noteworthy about the text you've found, and make a strong case, engaged with other relevant scholarship, for what this text contributes to our understanding of some dimension of eighteenth-century life and literature. Individually, your critical edition is worth 10% and your introductory essay is worth 20% of your final grade; together, your critical edition and introductory essay are worth 30% of your final grade.

Statement of Significance (5%)

Along with your critical edition and introductory essay, you should also submit a brief (250-300 word) statement about why this text is relevant to a contemporary audience. This piece should be written in plain language (i.e. suitable for a non-specialist audience), and should include a note about where you imagine this statement might be published. This assignment is worth 5% of your final grade for this course.

Assignment #3: Imitation & Explication (15%)

This is a creative assignment. At the end of this term, you will be invited to adapt one of the eighteenth-century poetic genres we've considered – e.g. the georgic, the pastoral, the apostrophe, the elegy, the epistle, or mock versions of any of these genres – to describe some aspect of our contemporary moment. In the spirit of neoclassical imitation, your creative work should clearly reflect the influence of the eighteenth-century genre you've borrowed, but you are also welcome to depart from, update, or critique the genre in any way you'd like. Your imitation should be accompanied by a brief (500-word) explication. Written in the style of a conventional close reading, this explication should clearly identify how you've leveraged (or transformed) the conventions of the genre you've imitated to make a clear argument about the world. Individually, your imitation is worth 5% and your explication is worth 10% of your final grade; taken together, this assignment is worth 15% of your final grade for this course. Bonus marks will be available for those who wish to share their imitations during our final class meeting.

Participation (15%)

Your participation in this course will be assessed in two parts:

- Once each week, you will be required to contribute to our class commonplace book on D2L. A complete contribution for each week includes two comments: at least one comment intended to start a new conversation (for instance, by asking a question, positing an original observation, or hypothesizing about how the assigned text responds to something we've already ready), and at least one comment in response to someone else's question or observation. You may post your comments at any point during the week, but the window for commentary on any one text will close at the moment that our class meeting on that text begins. At the end of term, these contributions will be marked for completion (Complete/Incomplete), and will be worth 10% of your final grade for this course.

- The rest of your participation grade (5%) will be based on your contributions to our in-class discussion. You will not be penalized for being absent, but just showing up is not a sufficient contribution to the class. Evidence of active and substantial engagement in this course will include: making comments that consistently demonstrate careful thought and creative analysis; listening actively and responding thoughtfully to your peers; contributing to cooperative argument-building by attempting to synthesize discussion and relate new readings to prior course material; being willing to take risks by identifying and advocating for new approaches to assigned readings; and arriving fully prepared with specific questions and ideas to share during each class. To make the most of our time together, please bring your books and critical readings with you to class.

Policies & Guidelines

Respectful Classroom Conduct

In order to create an atmosphere conducive to respectful conversation and the free exchange of ideas, please be considerate of your peers. We expect you to arrive on time and prepared for class, to keep from interrupting one another, and to give your full attention to our discussion. Rudeness, derogatory language, or personal attacks are not permitted. Also, you are welcome to take notes on a laptop, but please be mindful about your use of electronic devices in class. Checking social media sites, sending personal messages, and participating in other online activities unrelated to class distracts both you and the people around you – so unless the whole class has been asked to log on to D2L as part of a specific course activity, please use your laptop only for word processing or accessing our readings, and keep your cell phone stowed in your pocket or bag.

Talking (and Writing) About Difficult Subjects

Some of the texts assigned for this course will ask you to think critically about the literary construction of difference, and many of our in-class discussions will address the contemporary legacies of the diverse forms of structural oppression we'll find in our readings. If you find this work especially uncomfortable, or you would like to talk privately about how literary critics learn to engage with material that we find personally difficult to read, I hope that you will visit my office hours. In the meantime, please remember that each member of our course will bring different experiences with this material into the classroom – so let's approach each of our class discussions with patience and respect for one another, and do our best to take care of ourselves.

Office Hours & Email

All updates regarding readings or changes to the schedule will be posted on D2L. Whenever possible, however, I prefer to discuss course business in person during office hours, so I hope you will visit me during my twice weekly office hours (Tues. and Thurs., 3:30-4:30 p.m.), or email me to set up an appointment. Also, at least one week before each major writing assignment is due, I will circulate a sign-up sheet for appointments during and outside of these regular office hours, and I am always happy to use these appointments to discuss your work in progress. You will be able to find me in room SS1106 (down the hallway to the left of the elevators).

If you have a brief question about course business that has not been addressed on the syllabus, you are also welcome to email me. Please use your University of Calgary email address and put the course code [ENGL429] in your subject heading to ensure a prompt reply. Note, however, that I do not check my email regularly after 7:00 p.m. or on weekends. For additional advice about professional communication, please refer to the resources posted on D2L.

Late Assignments

All assignments must be submitted via D2L as either a Word document (.doc) or PDF (.pdf) by or before 11:59 p.m. on the day that they are due.

For all written assignments, the late penalty is 2% per business day (up to a maximum of 5 business days, after which point the essay will receive a mark of 0). There are no extensions. In the case of serious illness, please email me as soon as possible to discuss an alternate submission date, and plan to submit a doctor's note along with your assignment. Late papers should also be submitted online as a PDF (.pdf).

Because your contributions to the class commonplace book will be assessed for completion, there is no late penalty; contributions submitted before class begins on any one assigned text will be marked as 'Complete', and presentations not submitted before class begins will not be graded. Please note, however, you need to submit only 20 comments (or 10 full contributions) in order to complete this assignment, and you will have at least 24 opportunities to contribute over the course of the term.

Grading system

In this course, all essays, midterms, and exams will receive a numerical grade, which can be converted to the University of Calgary's four-point Undergraduate Grading System using the following scale:

90 + %	A+	4.0
85 – 89 %	A	4.0
80 – 84 %	A–	3.7
77 – 79 %	B+	3.3
74 – 76 %	B	3.0
70 – 73 %	B–	2.7
67 – 69 %	C+	2.3
64 – 66 %	C	2.0
60 – 63 %	C–	1.7
55 – 59 %	D+	1.3
50 – 54 %	D	1.0
0 – 49 %	F	0

Notes: According to the University Calendar (F.1), instructors may use their discretion when rounding upwards or downwards when the average of term work and exams is between two letter grades. Also, although the A+ is solely an honorific that entails no additional points in the four-point system, I will use this mark to distinguish superlative work that exceeds expectations in style, correctness, intellectual depth and breadth, sophistication, and originality.

Students do not need to complete every assignment in order to pass this course.

Grade appeals

Consult the University Calendar site on the Reappraisal of Grades and request advice from the English Department office, SS 1152. Please note that “mere dissatisfaction with a decision is not sufficient grounds for the appeal of a grade or other academic decision.”

Deferral of term work and final examinations

Should you require an extension for completion of term papers or assignments beyond the deadline of five days after the end of lectures, you must complete an Application of Deferment of Term Work form. For more information, refer to the University Calendar site on the Deferral of Final Examinations. See Calendar.

Academic regulations and schedules

Consult the University Calendar for course information, university and faculty regulations, dates, deadlines and schedules, student, faculty and university rights and responsibilities.

Academic Integrity

Plagiarism, even where it is unintentional, is a serious academic offense. Please read the following information carefully. The penalty routinely recommended by the English Department for documented plagiarism is failure of the course in which the offence occurred; academic probation is also routinely applied at the Faculty level. Suspension or expulsion can result from severe or repeated plagiarism.

The University Calendar states:

1. Plagiarism - Essentially plagiarism involves submitting or presenting work in a course as if it were the student's own work done expressly for that particular course when, in fact, it is not. Most commonly plagiarism exists when:

- (a) the work submitted or presented was done, in whole or in part, by an individual other than the one submitting or presenting the work (this includes having another impersonate the student or otherwise substituting the work of another for one's own in an examination or test),
- (b) parts of the work are taken from another source without reference to the original author,
- (c) the whole work (e.g., an essay) is copied from another source, and/or,
- (d) a student submits or presents work in one course which has also been submitted in another course (although it may be completely original with that student) without the knowledge of or prior agreement of the instructor involved.

While it is recognized that scholarly work often involves reference to the ideas, data and conclusions of other scholars, intellectual honesty requires that such references be explicitly and clearly noted.

Plagiarism occurs when direct quotations are taken from a source without specific acknowledgement, or when original ideas or data from the source are not acknowledged. Citing your sources in a bibliography is not enough, because a bibliography does not establish which parts of a student's work are taken from other sources. MLA (Modern Language Association) documentation or other recognized forms of citation must be used for this purpose. Advice on adequate documentation can be found here.

Department of English Statement on Principles of Conduct

According to the University Calendar, "The University of Calgary community has undertaken to be guided by the following statements of purpose and values: to promote free inquiry and debate, to act as a community of scholars, ..., to respect, appreciate, and encourage diversity, [and] to display care and concern for community". The Department of English, like the university as a whole, is committed to a "positive and productive learning and working environment." This environment is characterized by appreciation and encouragement of diversity and respect for the dignity of all persons: students, support staff, and faculty. The department will not tolerate unacceptable behaviour, such as threatening gestures, threatening or abusive verbal or written communication (including e-mails), or any conduct that "seriously disrupts the lawful education and related activities of students and/or university staff." Any cases of such misconduct should be reported immediately to the department Head, who, depending on the nature and severity of the incident, may then take further appropriate action.

Student Support

Accessibility Services

If you have a disability or any other concern about your ability to fully participate in this class, please contact Student Accessibility Services at (403) 220-8237 or refer to this website for their hours and location. If you require accommodations related to your coursework based on a protected ground other than disability, the University Student Accommodation Policy requires you to communicate this need in writing. If you contact Student Accessibility Services using the information listed above, their counselors can help you process the request and issue letters of accommodation to your instructors.

Academic and Personal Counseling

University can be a stressful time. If you are experiencing difficulty adjusting to university life, coping with anxiety or depression, or just want help developing good time- and stress-management skills, please contact the Wellness Centre to set up an appointment.
