Course Description:

One of the defining features of contemporary critical thought is its infinite openness to the Other. In Foucault's view, otherness is the hallmark of truth, and, as critics like Frédéric Gros and Barry Smart have pointed out, he never failed to anchor his concept of truth in a certain notion of otherness, ceaselessly formulating otherness without domesticating it into doctrine. At the heart of the legacies left behind by Levinas and Derrida is their infinite respect for otherness. Alain Badiou notes in Philosophy in the Present, "The philosopher is always a stranger, clothed in his new thoughts," for genuine philosophical commitment is "marked by its internal foreignness" (21). This course explores such internal foreignness as encountered in a selection of leading critical thinkers, situating them as a constellation of figures of radical otherness. The seminar readings and discussions will be structured along the following questions: Why is openness to the other the gateway to the true? Why is it that truth has to be established from the perspective of the other world or the other life? To what extent might critical thought's recalcitrant otherness translate into resistance to neoliberalism, which as a new form of governing rationality submits all spheres of social life to the rule of the market, transforming human beings into market actors? In what sense does literature explicitly or implicitly foster readers' appreciation and respect for other ways of being human and other modes of making sense? How do the novels read on the course offer different paths to inscribing otherness and truth?

Critical essay	40%
Participation	10%

Each student will make a seminar presentation. The written assignments will be a review essay (1500 words) and a research paper (5000 words for graduate students and 3500 words for 500-level students).

Students must submit all assignments to qualify for a passing grade. All take-home written assignments must be typewritten and double-spaced. You should use a 12 point type-size and a readable font. Take-home essays must adhere to the format and documentation outlined in the MLA Handbook (8th Edition).

All written assignments are to be submitted to the D2L dropboxes. Except in cases of illness or crisis, late papers will be penalized a fraction of a grade per day (i.e., an A paper handed in a day late will receive an A-; an A paper handed in two days late will receive a B+).

Grading System:

Letter Grade	Percentage	Grade Point Value
A+	90+%	4.0
A	85-89%	4.0
A-	80-84%	3.7

Although the A+ is solely an honorific that entails no additional points in the four-point system, the course instructor will employ this mark to distinguish superlative work that exceeds expectations in style, correctness, intellectual depth and breadth, sophistication, and originality.

In the case of Instructors using numerical marks in the grading of term work, the departmental conversion chart applies.

Universal Student Ratings of Instruction (USRI):

"At the University of Calgary, feedback provided by students through the Universal Student Ratings of Instruction (USRI) survey provides valuable information to help with evaluating instruction, enhancing learning and teaching, and selecting courses (www.ucalgary.ca/usri). Students who are absent from class assessments (tests, participation activities, or other assignments) should inform their instructors as soon as possible. Instructors may request that evidence in the form of documentation be provided. If the reason provided for the absence is acceptable, instructors may decide that any arrangements made can take forms other than make-up tests or assignments. For example, the weight of a missed grade may be added to another assignment or test.

For information on possible forms of documentation, including statutory declarations, please see <https://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/m-1.html>.

PLAGIARISM

Plagiarism is an extremely serious offence. Please read the following information carefully. The penalty routinely recommended by the English Department for documented plagiarism is failure of the course in which the offence occurred; academic probation is also routinely applied at the Faculty level. Suspension or expulsion can result from severe or repeated plagiarism.

The University Calendar states:

1. Plagiarism - Essentially plagiarism involves submitting or presenting work in a course as if it were the student's own work done expressly for that particular course when, in fact, it is not. Most commonly plagiarism exists when:

- a) the work submitted or presented was done, in whole or in part, by an individual other than the one submitting or presenting the work (this includes having another impersonate the student or otherwise substituting the work of another for one's own in an examination or test),
- b) parts of the work are taken from another source without reference to the original author,
- c) the whole work (e.g., an essay) is copied from another source, and/or,
- d) a student submits or presents work in one course which has also been submitted in another course (although it may be completely original with that student) without the knowledge of or prior agreement of the instructor involved.

While it is recognized that scholarly work often involves reference to the ideas, data and conclusions of other scholars, intellectual honesty requires that such references be explicitly and clearly noted.

Plagiarism occurs when direct quotations are taken from a source without specific acknowledgement, or when original ideas or data from the source are not acknowledged. Citing your sources in a bibliography is not enough, because a bibliography does not establish which parts of a student's work are taken from other sources. MLA (Modern Language Association) documentation or other recognized forms of citation must be used for this purpose. Advice on adequate documentation can be found at the following web sites:
