Course Description
It’s a good bet that ideas about love and romance vary among individuals. Is it also the case that concepts of love and romance vary over time and across social groups? Could it be that what is possible, permissible, and desirable in love stories is a function of the social positions of writers and readers? What can romance stories tell us about our culture(s), including differences across cultures and the power of our social environment to shape some of our most fundamental desires and beliefs?

In this course we will review some of the models of love that have existed historically. We will be particularly concerned with contemporary notions of romantic love that sustain the romance novel, arguably the most popular form of North American literature today. Our readings will begin with a pioneering modern romance, Charlotte Brontë’s Jane Eyre. From there we will examine stories that challenge the romance paradigm, considering how gender, class, and ethnicity influence love stories.

This course will use assigned texts to introduce students to literary studies as an academic discipline on the university level. Through close reading, critical writing and rewriting, and thoughtful discussion about specific texts, students will develop the practical skills necessary in the discipline. Writing will be considered as both a process of discovery and as an academic practice with particular forms and conventions.

About Writing Exercises
I will assign short exercises of various kinds during the semester. You will post some of the completed exercises to D2L, you will submit some by email, and some I will collect in class. I will provide more information on these assignments in class and on D2L.

About Class Participation
Because this is a class that will demand considerable participation, your effort and involvement are essential to a successful learning experience (not only for you, but for your classmates). You should come to class with all necessary materials and prepared to participate actively in small- and large-group discussions, take part in workshops, offer considered responses to assigned readings, and respond respectfully and thoughtfully to other students’ ideas. A good way to gauge your level of participation is to ask yourself, “How would this class function if everyone participated exactly as much as I do?”

Late Papers
Essays may not be submitted late without prior permission. If a legitimate emergency (illness, death in the family, etc.) prevents you from submitting an assignment on time or getting prior permission for an extension, you must provide evidence of the emergency and contact me as soon as possible to discuss alternative arrangements. Assignments submitted late without permission or valid excuse will be penalized a third of a grade for each late day (i.e., an A paper that is one day late will receive an A-, two days late a B+, and so on; weekend days and holidays are counted in this total).

Turning in Assignments
Essays should be submitted through the digital dropbox on D2L. If this is not possible, you may deliver your assignment to Social Sciences 1152 and put it in the drop box, where your work will be date-stamped and placed in my mailbox. Please keep a copy of your assignment in case of loss. Papers cannot be returned by staff in the department office. Papers may not be delivered by email without prior permission.

PLAGIARISM

Plagiarism is an extremely serious offence. Please read the following information carefully. The penalty routinely recommended by the English Department for documented plagiarism is failure of the course in which the offence occurred; academic probation is also routinely applied at the Faculty level. Suspension or expulsion can result from severe or repeated plagiarism.

The University Calendar states:

1. Plagiarism - Essentially plagiarism involves submitting or presenting work in a course as if it were the student's own work done expressly for that particular course when, in fact, it is not. Most commonly plagiarism exists when:
   (a) the work submitted or presented was done, in whole or in part, by an individual other than the one submitting or presenting the work (this includes having another impersonate the student or otherwise substituting the work of another for one's own in an examination or test),
   (b) parts of the work are taken from another source without reference to the original author,
   (c) the whole work (e.g., an essay) is copied from another source, and/or,
   (d) a student submits or presents work in one course which has also been submitted in another course (although it may be completely original with that student) without the knowledge of or prior agreement of the instructor involved.

While it is recognized that scholarly work often involves reference to the ideas, data and conclusions of other scholars, intellectual honesty requires that such references be explicitly and clearly noted.

Plagiarism occurs when direct quotations are taken from a source without specific acknowledgement, or when original ideas or data from the source are not acknowledged. Citing your sources in a bibliography is not enough, because a bibliography does not establish which parts of a student’s work are taken from other sources. MLA (Modern Language Association) documentation or other recognized forms of citation must be used for this purpose. Advice on adequate documentation can be found at the following web sites:

DEPARTMENT OF ENGLISH STATEMENT ON PRINCIPLES OF CONDUCT

According to the University Calendar, (http://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/j.html)
“The University of Calgary community has undertaken to be guided by the following statements of purpose and values: to promote free inquiry and debate, to act as a community of scholars, ..., to respect, appreciate, and encourage diversity, [and] to display care and concern for community”. The Department of English, like the university as a whole, is committed to a “positive and productive learning and working environment.” This environment is characterized by appreciation and encouragement of diversity and respect for the dignity of all persons: students, support staff, and faculty. The department will not tolerate unacceptable behaviour, such as threatening gestures, threatening or abusive verbal or written communication (including e-mails), or any conduct that “seriously disrupts the lawful education and related activities of students and/or university staff”. Any cases of such misconduct should be reported immediately to the department Head, who, depending on the nature and severity of the incident, may then take further appropriate action.
