Course description:

This course examines literary representations of shipwrecks and castaways, literal and figurative. Shipwreck and castaway narratives allow writers to explore larger thematic concerns such as human isolation, utopias and dystopias, and allegories of colonialism, and this course will consider these concerns in our discussions. We will cover drama, fiction, and poetry, read writing from the early 17th century to the present, and read works by writers from Great Britain, the United States, Dominica, and Canada.

The general aims of English 203 include:

1) Teaching students close reading, which, among other things, requires a student to realize that a text is constructed, and not a transparent reflection of reality
2) Introducing students to a range of technical terms and critical tools with which to interpret texts
3) Instructing students how to write an effective, well-supported, clearly written academic essay. This includes teaching students the idea of writing as a process by guiding them through the various stages of composition and teaching students how to create debatable thesis statements.
4) Teaching students proper documentation, including what constitutes plagiarism
5) Teaching students library research skills: how to search and locate reference works, books and articles, both electronic and print; how to access and use scholarly resources and databases; and how to use online resources responsibly and thoughtfully
6) Teaching students to engage with other scholars by assigning at least one exercise or assignment that asks them to respond to at least one critical text
7) Teaching students to value and build upon each other’s ideas by actively fostering discussion
8) Establishing a framework for fostering collegiality and scholarly consultation, accomplished through small group class work or projects as well as individual consultations between instructors and students

Participation will be a measure of your attendance at and preparation for each class. This will be measured quantitatively, with periodic, unannounced quizzes in class on the day’s assigned reading. There will be five such quizzes; the lowest grade of these will be dropped and the remaining grades averaged to determine your mark for this component. This is to account for unfortunate occurrences, such as your illness or the death of a close relative. Consequently, there will be no rewrites for these quizzes.

The analyses of prose and poetry passages will each be about two pages (500 words), and will be on either a passage from The Tempest or The Rime of the Ancient Mariner in the case of poetry, or Robinson Crusoe or a short story by Edgar Allan Poe in the case of prose. Further details on these assignments will be provided in class. There will be two midterm tests, one in October and one in November. The research paper will be about 2000 words and will be on one of the later texts we study. As part of the research paper assignment you will be asked to submit either an abstract or an annotated bibliography in advance of completing the paper; there will also be a draft process for this assignment (further explained in class). The final exam will be cumulative and scheduled by the Registrar. Students must be available for examinations up to the last day of the examination period (December 11-22).

You do not have to complete all assignments to receive a passing grade in this course. Assignments submitted after the deadline will be penalized (e.g. with the loss of a third of a grade for each day [not class] that the assignment is overdue). Extra-credit assignments will not be offered.

Note: Please make all efforts to take assignments directly to the instructor. If it is not possible to do so, take your assignment to SS1152 and place it in the drop-box. Your assignment will then be date-stamped and placed in your instructor’s mailbox. Please keep a copy of your assignment in case of loss by any cause. Assignments cannot be returned by staff in the Department office. E-mailed submissions will not be accepted and will be deleted.

Note regarding technologies:

Please turn off all communication devices during class. Laptop computers are acceptable in class as long as they do not present a distraction to others. I reserve the right to ban computers from the class if anyone’s computer presents a distraction. I am happy to answer inquiries via e-mail but please note that proper e-mail etiquette should be followed, and that what you consider ‘urgent’ may not be considered urgent by others. I will not respond to inquiries over e-mail regarding matters I have addressed in class. You are encouraged to meet someone in the class early in term and exchange e-mails so you can help one another if one person misses a class.

Note regarding textbooks:

Much of this class will involve close readings from theoretical and literary texts. As such, students are required to have the texts to be discussed with them in class. Students who consistently do not have the texts with them in class will receive a grade of ‘0’ for participation, after a written warning from the instructor.

Plagiarism is an extremely serious offence. Please read the following information carefully. The penalty routinely recommended by the English Department for documented plagiarism is failure of the course in which the offence occurred; academic probation is also routinely applied at the Faculty level. Suspension or expulsion can result from severe or repeated plagiarism.

The University Calendar states:

1. Plagiarism - Essentially plagiarism involves submitting or presenting work in a course as if it were the student's own work done expressly for that particular course when, in fact, it is not. Most commonly plagiarism exists when:
   (a) the work submitted or presented was done, in whole or in part, by an individual other than the one submitting or presenting the work (this includes having another impersonate the student or otherwise substituting the work of another for one's own in an examination or test),
   (b) parts of the work are taken from another source without reference to the original author,
   (c) the whole work (e.g., an essay) is copied from another source, and/or,
   (d) a student submits or presents work in one course which has also been submitted in another course (although it may be completely original with that student) without the knowledge of or prior agreement of the instructor involved.

While it is recognized that scholarly work often involves reference to the ideas, data and conclusions of other scholars, intellectual honesty requires that such references be explicitly and clearly noted.

Plagiarism occurs when direct quotations are taken from a source without specific acknowledgement, or when original ideas or data from the source are not acknowledged. Citing your sources in a bibliography is not enough, because a bibliography does not establish which parts of a student’s work are taken from other sources. MLA (Modern Language Association) documentation or other recognized forms of citation must be used for this purpose. Advice on adequate documentation can be found at the following web sites:

DEPARTMENT OF ENGLISH STATEMENT ON PRINCIPLES OF CONDUCT

According to the University Calendar, (http://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/j.html)
“The University of Calgary community has undertaken to be guided by the following statements of purpose and values: to promote free inquiry and debate, to act as a community of scholars, …, to respect, appreciate, and encourage diversity, [and] to display care and concern for community”. The Department of English, like the university as a whole, is committed to a “positive and productive learning and working environment.” This environment is characterized by appreciation and encouragement of diversity and respect for the dignity of all persons: students, support staff, and faculty. The department will not tolerate unacceptable behaviour, such as threatening gestures, threatening or abusive verbal or written communication (including e-mails), or any conduct that “seriously disrupts the lawful education and related activities of students and/or university staff”. Any cases of such misconduct should be reported immediately to the department Head, who, depending on the nature and severity of the incident, may then take further appropriate action.
