Course description:

This course provides a rough survey of Canadian literature from the 19th century to the present, with an emphasis on writing since the Second World War. The course attempts to provide representation of Canadian writing from various time periods, regions, and genres (novel, short story, poetry [lyric, long, experimental], sketch, essay). The course includes instruction in the writing of research papers, and will also involve work in our special collections. Our class will digitize selected papers of one of the writers we are studying, and produce an online exhibit.

Texts and readings:

Online readings (available on D2L): Including selections from Susanna Moodie’s Roughing it in the Bush; selected poetry of Archibald Lampman and Duncan Campbell Scott; Sinclair Ross' short story "A Field of Wheat;" selected poetry by F.R. Scott and Phyllis Webb; and a short story by Alice Munro.

Frederick Philip Grove, Settlers of the Marsh
Mordecai Richler, The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz
Margaret Atwood, Surfacing
Eden Robinson, Monkey Beach

Participation will be a measure of your attendance at and preparation for each class. This will be measured quantitatively, with periodic, unannounced quizzes in class on the day’s assigned reading. There will be five such quizzes; the lowest grade of these will be dropped and the remaining grades averaged to determine your mark for this component. This is to account for unfortunate occurrences, such as your illness or the death of a close relative. Consequently, there will be no rewrites for these quizzes.

The archival project will require you to go to the Special Collections in the TFDL, locate an assigned text, take a digital photo of the text, and post the photo to D2L. You will then write and submit a short (500-750 word) explanatory text. The explanatory text will differ according to the material you are working on; this material will include manuscripts in the papers of writers we are studying, and the little magazine Tish. Further details on this assignment will be given in class.

Once the archival projects are completed, as a class we will decide which materials we will digitize and add to the TFDL’s online platform, “Reading the Canadian Archive,” which can be viewed at omeka.ucalgary.ca. You will then divide into groups of four, and at an assigned point in the remainder of the term, your group will go to the digitization lab where the papers will be waiting, and participate in the digitization process. Your group will then collectively add metadata (this will be explained in class), and write a short (one paragraph) description of the digitized materials for the exhibit. Finally, in the last two classes of the term, groups will briefly present their contributions to the online exhibit to the rest of the class.

You will write an eight-page (2000 word) research paper on one of the texts we are studying. This paper will be due on the last day of classes.

There will be a midterm test and a final exam. The final exam will be cumulative, and will be scheduled by the Registrar. Students must be available for examinations up to the last day of the examination period (Dec. 11-22).

You do not have to complete all assignments to receive a passing grade in this course. Assignments submitted after the deadline will be penalized (e.g. with the loss of a third of a grade for each day [not class] that the assignment is overdue). Extra-credit assignments will not be offered.

Note: Please make all efforts to take assignments directly to the instructor. If it is not possible to do so, take your assignment to SS1152 and place it in the drop-box. Your assignment will then be date-stamped and placed in your instructor’s mailbox. Please keep a copy of your assignment in case of loss by any cause. Assignments cannot be returned by staff in the Department office. E-mailed submissions will not be accepted and will be deleted.

Note regarding technologies:

Please turn off all communication devices during class. Laptop computers are acceptable in class as long as they do not present a distraction to others. I reserve the right to ban computers from the class if anyone’s computer presents a distraction. I am happy to answer inquiries via e-mail but please note that proper e-mail etiquette should be followed, and what you consider ‘urgent’ may not be considered urgent by others. I will not respond to inquiries over e-mail regarding matters I have addressed in class. You are encouraged to meet someone in the class early in term and exchange e-mails so you can help one another if one person misses a class.
Note regarding textbooks:

Much of this class will involve close readings from literary texts. As such, students are required to have the texts to be discussed with them in class, including hard copies of materials posted to D2L. Students who consistently do not have the texts with them in class will receive a grade of ‘0’ for participation, after a written warning from the instructor.

PLAGIARISM

Plagiarism is an extremely serious offence. Please read the following information carefully. The penalty routinely recommended by the English Department for documented plagiarism is failure of the course in which the offence occurred; academic probation is also routinely applied at the Faculty level. Suspension or expulsion can result from severe or repeated plagiarism.

The University Calendar states:

1. Plagiarism - Essentially plagiarism involves submitting or presenting work in a course as if it were the student's own work done expressly for that particular course when, in fact, it is not. Most commonly plagiarism exists when:
(a) the work submitted or presented was done, in whole or in part, by an individual other than the one submitting or presenting the work (this includes having another impersonate the student or otherwise substituting the work of another for one's own in an examination or test),
(b) parts of the work are taken from another source without reference to the original author,
(c) the whole work (e.g., an essay) is copied from another source, and/or,
(d) a student submits or presents work in one course which has also been submitted in another course (although it may be completely original with that student) without the knowledge of or prior agreement of the instructor involved.

While it is recognized that scholarly work often involves reference to the ideas, data and conclusions of other scholars, intellectual honesty requires that such references be explicitly and clearly noted.

Plagiarism occurs when direct quotations are taken from a source without specific acknowledgement, or when original ideas or data from the source are not acknowledged. Citing your sources in a bibliography is not enough, because a bibliography does not establish which parts of a student’s work are taken from other sources. MLA (Modern Language Association) documentation or other recognized forms of citation must be used for this purpose. Advice on adequate documentation can be found at the following web sites:
