This course surveys developments in Canadian literature from the 1950s to the present. We will read novels, short fiction, poetry, drama, and essays. The course will examine the relationship between “Canadian literature” and the colonial project during this time period: how might literary texts, and the way they are framed within academic discussion, serve to support or legitimize that project? How might they challenge or critique it? Students will have the opportunity to do primary research in the papers of writers we are studying held in Archives and Special Collections at the Taylor Family Digital Library (TFDL), or to record local literary readings and create a digital collection in the TFDL. We will consider Canadian writing as an ongoing practice within developing institutions, and to this end we will invite some of the writers we are studying to visit our class.

Texts and readings:

Ethel Wilson, Swamp Angel
Maria Campbell, Halfbreed
Alice Munro, The Moons of Jupiter
Daphne Marlatt, Ana Historic
Addena Sumter-Freitag, Stay Black and Die

Online readings (available on D2L unless otherwise noted). We will be making use of the bpNichol archive at bpnichol.ca. D2L readings include “Naked Poems,” by Phyllis Webb; selections from Inventory, by Dionne Brand; and Seed Catalogue, “Sounding the Name,” and “The Poet’s Mother,” by Robert Kroetsch.

Note on course content:

We are studying a Western literature from the mid-20th century to the present; as such, students can expect some of the material to be sexually explicit and / or possibly disturbing. Texts by Indigenous authors, in particular, may deal with troubling content such as racism, sexual violence, and substance abuse. Students who are concerned with or troubled by the readings are invited to discuss any concerns with me.

Assignments and Evaluation:

Participation 10%
Archive Assignment 25%
Midterm test                                           10%
Close listening exercises (pass/fail)       5%
Research Paper                                       30%
Final exam                                              20%
100%

Participation will be a measure of your attendance at and preparation for each class. This will be measured quantitatively, with periodic, unannounced quizzes in class on the day’s assigned reading. There will be five such quizzes; the lowest grade of these will be dropped and the remaining grades averaged to determine your mark for this component. This is to account for unfortunate occurrences, such as your illness or the death of a close relative. Consequently, there will be no rewrites for these quizzes.

The archival project will require you to either work in Special Collections at the TDFL, or record readings of the local Flywheel reading series and work with the created files. You will work in small groups for part of these projects, but submit essays and be evaluated individually. There will be both a written and oral component of this project; further details will be provided on the first day of classes.

The close listening assignments will take place in the final week of classes, when we study the literary audio recordings created by students in the class. These exercises will involve working with the sound files created by several classmates, and will comprise an at-home transcription exercise (2.5%) and an in-class listening test (2.5%). These are pass/fail exercises. The results of these exercises may be referenced in future publications by Dr. Wiens and/or a graduate research assistant. All students who complete these exercises will be asked to sign a consent form agreeing to participate in a study. If you choose not to sign the consent form, you can still complete the exercises to get credit; your exercises will simply not be considered alongside others for the purposes of the study. A research assistant will handle the signing and collecting of the consent forms, and they will not be made available to the instructor until after the course is completed and the deadline for appeals has passed. Dr. Wiens will photocopy the submissions for each of these exercises before returning the originals to the students. The names of students will then be removed from the copied exercises. Dr. Wiens will retain the copies in case he wishes to discuss these exercises and their results in a research presentation. In any such presentation or publication, no students’ names will be used.

You will write a major research paper of 9-10 pages, due on the last day of classes. As part of this assignment you will need to submit an abstract with a brief annotated bibliography (for marks) two weeks before the due date.

There will be a midterm test and a final exam. The midterm will be open book and take place in class on October 18. The final exam will be cumulative, and will be scheduled by the Registrar.

You do not have to complete all assignments to receive a passing grade in this course. Assignments submitted after the deadline will be penalized (e.g. with the loss of a third of a grade for each day [not class] that the assignment is overdue). Extra-credit assignments will not be offered.

Note: Please make all efforts to take assignments directly to the instructor. If it is not possible to do so, take your assignment to SS1152 and place it in the drop-box. Your assignment will then be date-stamped and placed in your instructor’s mailbox. Please keep a copy of your assignment in case of loss by any cause. Assignments cannot be returned by staff in the Department office. E-mailed submissions will not be accepted and will be deleted.

Note regarding technologies:

Please turn off all communication devices during class. Laptop computers are acceptable in class as long as they do not present a distraction to others. I reserve the right to ban computers from the class if anyone’s computer presents a distraction. I am happy to answer inquiries via e-mail but please note that proper e-mail etiquette should be followed, and what you consider ‘urgent’ may not be considered urgent by others. I will not respond to inquiries over e-mail regarding matters I have addressed in class. You are encouraged to meet someone in the class early in term and exchange e-mails so you can help one another if one person misses a class.

Note regarding textbooks:

Much of this class will involve close readings from literary texts. As such, students are required to have the texts to be discussed with them in class, including hard copies of materials posted to D2L. Students who consistently do not have the texts with them in class will receive a grade of ‘0’ for participation, after a written warning from the instructor.

Grading system:

The following grading system is used in this course:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Grade</th>

PLAGIARISM

Plagiarism is an extremely serious offence. Please read the following information carefully. The penalty routinely recommended by the English Department for documented plagiarism is failure of the course in which the offence occurred; academic probation is also routinely applied at the Faculty level. Suspension or expulsion can result from severe or repeated plagiarism.
The University Calendar states:

1. Plagiarism - Essentially plagiarism involves submitting or presenting work in a course as if it were the student's own work done expressly for that particular course when, in fact, it is not. Most commonly plagiarism exists when:
   (a) the work submitted or presented was done, in whole or in part, by an individual other than the one submitting or presenting the work (this includes having another impersonate the student or otherwise substituting the work of another for one's own in an examination or test),
   (b) parts of the work are taken from another source without reference to the original author,
   (c) the whole work (e.g., an essay) is copied from another source, and/or,
   (d) a student submits or presents work in one course which has also been submitted in another course (although it may be completely original with that student) without the knowledge of or prior agreement of the instructor involved.

While it is recognized that scholarly work often involves reference to the ideas, data and conclusions of other scholars, intellectual honesty requires that such references be explicitly and clearly noted.

Plagiarism occurs when direct quotations are taken from a source without specific acknowledgement, or when original ideas or data from the source are not acknowledged. Citing your sources in a bibliography is not enough, because a bibliography does not establish which parts of a student’s work are taken from other sources. MLA (Modern Language Association) documentation or other recognized forms of citation must be used for this purpose. Advice on adequate documentation can be found at the following web sites:

DEPARTMENT OF ENGLISH STATEMENT ON PRINCIPLES OF CONDUCT

According to the University Calendar, http://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/j.html “The University of Calgary community has undertaken to be guided by the following statements of purpose and values: to promote free inquiry and debate, to act as a community of scholars, ..., to respect, appreciate, and encourage diversity, [and] to display care and concern for community”. The Department of English, like the university as a whole, is committed to a “positive and productive learning and working environment.” This environment is characterized by appreciation and encouragement of diversity and respect for the dignity of all persons: students, support staff, and faculty. The department will not tolerate unacceptable behaviour, such as threatening gestures, threatening or abusive verbal or written communication (including e-mails), or any conduct that “seriously disrupts the lawful education and related activities of students and/or university staff”. Any cases of such misconduct should be reported immediately to the department Head, who, depending on the nature and severity of the incident, may then take further appropriate action.
